

Volunteers Start New Tasks

Preparing to board a bus bound for Willowbrook State School is a portion of the 45 Staten Island senior citizens who volunteered to help in occupational therapy and other areas at the school.

Doing Their Part All Over Again

Old? Useless? Cast Aside? Too often, senior citizens feel that way.

But such feelings are not to be found among 45 Staten Islanders "beyond middle age" who already have done their part for society but still know they can help a fellow human being.

They have volunteered to serve at Willowbrook State School, helping in occupational therapy and other areas.

Can anyone — young or old — perform a more useful, a more satisfying and more necessary service?
