

STATEN ISLAND ADVANCE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 8, 1969

Summer day for retarded child: Therapy and learning

With the aid of amplification, Miss Joan Grustein, a therapist, makes use of residual sound that all deaf children have, to teach them how to reproduce sounds necessary for speech, during the last week of Willowbrook State School's summer session. She is flanked by an assistant, Lautha Gray, as Andre Vel...

During the summer session, these boys spend half the school day in the woodworking shop under the supervision of Harold Robinson, who is shown aiding a student in the construction of a cabinet. Several boys have learned both to design and build furniture on their own. The entire summer program is federally funded.

S.I. Advance Photos by Berry G. Schwartz