

Staten Island Advance

Staten Island, N.Y., Wednesday, September 1, 1971

Children from Willowbrook State School enjoy a free hamburger picnic during an outing at Barrett Park, West Brighton. Helping out with the meal are Mrs. Santa Smith, left, recreation assistant, and Mrs. Alexis Hebert, recreational supervisor.

S.I. Advance Photo by Barry G. Schwartz

Kids put big bite on Burger King

There's no such thing as a free lunch? There is for four months for quite a few Willowbrook State School students.

Yesterday a campaign designed to feed 1,100 lunches of the school's children on field trips was launched by David Baker, supervisor of the Burger

King restaurant at Forest Ave. and Willowbrook Rd., Port Richmond Center.

The kids will receive a whopper (10 oz. hamburger), french fries, and a drink from the chain. Baker said that several times before Willowbrook had perhaps they could have more field trips and projects at too that they don't get out very often and their budget looked a little tight," commented the supervisor, who thought of the idea for the free lunch.

"I thought I could relieve their budget a little bit so perhaps they could have more field trips and projects at school," said Baker.

"When you stop and think about it, 1,100 free lunches are a very small contribution.

We've allowed part of our budget that we feel should go towards the good will of the community and hope to do more in this line in the future.