

Mrs. Frances Quadrino, in charge of tailoring shop at the Arthur Kill Rehabilitation Center, tries one of her creations on a resident of Willowbrook State School while Virgil Hodges, left, director of Arthur Kill, and Stanleya Slawinski, chief of services at Willowbrook, look on.

S.I. Advance Photo by Barry G. Schwartz

Willowbrook residents get new clothes

About 36 residents at Willowbrook State School got new clothes yesterday made by a tailoring group at the Arthur Kill Community Rehabilitation Center.

Rehabilitation center residents made the garments in sewing and tailoring classes and center director Virgil Hodges said it was the beginning of a closer link between the two state institutions.

Other projects and clothing repairs will be provided for Willowbrook residents in the future, he said.