Probe fake alarms at state school

The Fire Department is currently investigating a rash of false fire alarms that have been sent from Willowbrook State School.

A Fire Department representative claimed that there have been more than 300 false alarms from Willowbrook since March 8, although they have decreased during the last week.

Since they come from different buildings it is difficult to pinpoint exactly who is sending them in. Chief Fire Marshal Edwin Sheppard said there are no results of the investigation yet and no apprehensions.
