

Willowbrook panel to conduct hearing

The Willowbrook Review Panel will hold its third open hearing Sunday from 1 to 3:30 p.m. in the auditorium at Willowbrook Developmental Center.

The hearing is to enable anyone who wishes to address the independent, court-appointed panel, which is charged by a federal court with overseeing a reduction in the center's population and improving the center's programs.

At the last two hearings the panel has been harangued by Willowbrook observers who have complained about the slow progress of implementing a court-supervised set of regulations.

Each speaker will be limited to five minutes, and written statements may be submitted to the panel without scheduling time to speak.
