Center names man to board of directors

The supervisor of a Catholic Guardian Society youth home in New Dorp has been appointed to Willowbrook Developmental Center's board of visitors.

Louis Jacobi, 34, of 4358 Virginia Ave., Rosebank, was sworn in yesterday for a four-year term by Mario Cuomo, New York's secretary of state, at an official ceremony in Cuomo's Manhattan office.

A former parochial school teacher in Philadelphia, Jacobi is chairman of the South Shore Youth Coalition and the Human Resources Advisory Council of Staten Island, a member of the board of director of the Staten Island Community Corporation who works with the Benevolent Society for Retarded Children.

He is a former director of a summer recreational program for young people, and a former member of the Staten Advisory Council on Drug Abuse.

Jacobi, who attended Wagner, Allentown and Iona Colleges, will serve in the non-salaried post on the visiting board until Dec. 31, 1979.
