Willowbrook isn't all bad

The Staten Island Advance presents only the negative facts regarding Willowbrook Developmental Center.

I work at Willowbrook and see many positive programs for the residents. I see things that should get approval — for example: Building 61, the workshop where the profoundly retarded work in a factory setting, or Building 3, the school where blind and deaf retarded residents learn. I see patience, love and understanding.

I would like the readers of the Advance presented with a more positive report. Write about the good — there's plenty to write about as well as the bad.
