

Retarded don't get proper staff care

In the case of the mentally retarded, the buildings at Willowbrook did not fail. The people who cared for the retarded failed.

Why does the state insist that placing "little Willowbrooks" in residential areas is a guaranteed success? The houses don't care for the mentally retarded.

Why doesn't the state have well-qualified attendants, under responsible guidance and leadership? Why doesn't the state spend its money on people, instead of buildings?

HILDEGARD DENNAN,
Grasmere