

New Brighton woman reappointed by Carey

Marjorie Williams of 145 Cassidy Pl., New Brighton, a retired occupational therapy instructor for the state Mental Hygiene Department, has been reappointed by Gov. Carey to the board of visitors of the Staten Island Developmental Center, Willowbrook, it was announced today.

Mrs. Williams, a volunteer worker for the Democratic County Committee for many years, was first named to the seven-member panel in April 1978 on the recommendation of former County Chairman James A. Smith.

During her six-year stint with the state agency, she worked at the Willowbrook facility. A graduate of the former Maxwell School for teacher training, Mrs. Williams had been an administrative assistant for 20 years in a military intelligence unit of the Army at Fort Jay on Governors Island.

In 1973, she managed the North Shore campaign headquarters for Abraham D. Beame, who won the mayoral election. Later that year, she was honored by the Democratic Organization of Richmond County for her contributions to the party and the club.
