

Here & there: a Begelman blessing

- Gladys Begelman, whose hubby David is MGM boss, celebrated becoming a grandma at Abe's Steak House on Third Ave. Daughter Mrs. James De-Woody delivered a boy, 7 pounds, 12 ounces, at Mount Sinai Hospital.
- Clint Eastwood will be coming out of the California wilderness, where he lives in seclusion, to start filming his latest epic—about espionage in the Soviet Union. Since the Soviets won't let Clint bring his cameras behind the Iron Curtain, he'll shoot scenes in Vienna instead.
- Jim Introne is being groomed to take the No. 2 spot in the governor's office in Albany under Robert Morgado, top gun to Gov. Carey. Introne will replace Michael DelGuidice, who quit for big bucks from an investment firm. And, while Carey is in Greece, he's losing his Greek-American assistant, Mark Karas. Karas gave up his Albany TV job to join Carey's staff but is going back to TV. He will take the Albany anchor spot of Channel 6's Alec
- Can't stop those rumors that James Tully, pride and joy of Highland Falls, N.Y. is eager to run for state controller. Maybe that's why incumbent GOP Controller Edward Regan is appearing at so many fund-raisers. Tully has been state tax commissioner for nearly seven years, close to a record for service in that high-tension post.
- Joe Kipness, the former truckdriver who turned restaurateur-producer, gets the Friend of Israel award tonight, same time Liz Taylor receives the Freedom Award, from the Emunah Women of America. Look for Joe's good pal, producer David Merrick, to be at the Milford Plaza Hotel cheering.
- Perth Amboy Mayor-Assemblyman George Otlowksi, who will be grand marshal of the Oct. 4 Pulaski Parade on Fifth Ave., says Lech Walesa, leader of the Polish Solidarity labor federation, expects to visit the U.S. late next month and may be special guest at the parade.
