

Community effort brings Island cheese

Distribution of 111,000 pounds of government-donated cheese will begin tomorrow on Staten Island at the Cassidy Coles senior citizens center in New Brighton.

More than 75,000 pounds of the truck for the Youth Action Center, which is distributing the cheese.

The first 35,000 pounds of the shipment were transported by five Advance delivery trucks last Friday.

Charles Washington, director of the Youth Action Center, a Stapleton anti-poverty group, announced the distribution schedule yesterday:

Good news

cheese were brought to the Island yesterday with a tractor-trailer provided by Harbor Freight Transport Corp. of Elizabeth, N.J., whose president, Stephen LiBerti, is a Staten Island resident.

The North Shore Kiwanis Club of Staten Island provided two men, Harold Kaplan and Robert Hanssen, to help transport the cheese. The club's president, Eugene McGough, works for Harbor Freight and obtained the

A truckload full of cheese arrives at the Staten Island Developmental Center. The Willowbrook complex is the storehouse for the cheese, which will be distributed to needy families.