

Fire yesterday damaged the attic and roof of a vacant building in the Staten Island Developmental Center, Willowbrook, fire officials reported.

The blaze began in Building 27, an unused office building, at 3:06 p.m. and quickly spread to the attic and roof. The fire was put out 45 minutes later by firefighters with the 22nd Battalion.

One firefighter, who was unidentified, was cut on the neck by a nail and was treated at the scene, officials said.
