Assemblywoman Elizabeth Connelly apparently is still in the running to head the statewide Division of Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse.

After some prodding, she confirmed that she had an interview for the post on Thursday.

If she is selected, sources said, it would likely be announced within a month so that the Senate can hold its required confirmation proceeding before the summer recess.

→ Speculation remains alive about the consideration of Ella Curry, director of the Staten Island Developmental Center, for the position of state Mental Health Commissioner.
