Biographical Note

John J. Marchi, the son of Louis and Alina Marchi, was born on May 20, 1921, in Staten Island, New York. He graduated from Manhattan College with first honors in 1942, later receiving a Juris Doctor from St. John's University School of Law and Doctor of Judicial Science from Brooklyn Law School in 1953. He engaged in the general practice of law with offices on Staten Island and has lectured extensively to Italian jurists at the request of the State Department. Marchi served in the Coast Guard and Navy during World War II and was on combat duty in the Atlantic and Pacific theatres of war. Marchi also served as a Commander in the Active Reserve after the war, retiring from the service in 1982.

John J. Marchi was first elected to the New York State Senate in the 1956 General Election. As a Senator, he quickly rose to influential Senate positions through the chairmanship of many standing and joint committees, including Chairman of the Senate Standing Committee on the City of New York. In 1966, he was elected as a Delegate to the Constitutional Convention and chaired the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Constitutional Issues. That same year, Senator Marchi was named Chairman of the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Interstate Cooperation, the oldest joint legislative committee in the Legislature. Other senior state government leadership positions followed, and this focus on state government relations and the City of New York permeated Senator Marchi's career for the next few decades.

In 1969, Marchi decided to challenge John V. Lindsay's reelection campaign, announcing that he would run a primary campaign to obtain the Republican Party's endorsement that would allow him to run for Mayor in the General Election of that year. Senator Marchi ran on a platform of fighting crime, reducing welfare rolls, court reform, and a general clean-up of New York City – positions that were in keeping with those of the Conservative Party, on whose party line he also ran, as well as conservative members of the Republican Party. However, liberals also credited him with running an intelligent, non-rancorous campaign. He won the Republican primary and went on to challenge Lindsay once more in the General Election. This time, Marchi was defeated, but he returned in 1973 to once more conduct a mayoral campaign. Losing again in the General Election, Marchi resumed his work in the New York State Senate, where he served as the Chairman of the Finance Committee and a ranking member of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Throughout the 1970s, Senator Marchi was at the forefront of issues such as reform of the New York City School system, educational change, transportation improvement, and crime prevention. His position as Chairman of the Finance Committee made him instrumental in dealing with New York City's mid-seventies fiscal crisis, and he provided leadership in the establishment of the Emergency Financial Control Board and the Municipal Assistance Corporation. The chairman's position also provided him with the ability to channel funds to many arts and cultural institutions on Staten Island, in particular the Snug Harbor Cultural Center. He also played a critical role in securing funds for mental health programs on the Island, and joined his fellow Island legislators in the nascent movement to deal with local environmental problems.

The Senate Finance Committee also brought about important change under Senator Marchi's leadership. Marchi sponsored the bill that modernized New York State's reporting and bookkeeping practices. The Finance Committee also gained greater power to review and assess the Executive budget and ancillary programs and introduced better methods of economic forecasting. Overall, these changes allowed for more clear and accurate views of the state's financial picture, and gave the Legislature more power in the budget process.

In the 1980s, one issue dominated the agenda of Marchi and his constituents: the secession movement. In 1983, a lawsuit challenged the legality of New York City's Board of Estimate as violating the "one-man one vote" democratic principle. The successful challenge left Staten Island and its 350,000 population with much reduced representation in city government. Marchi decided immediately to promote changing Staten Island from a borough of New York City to a separate county or city. For the next decade and a half, Senator Marchi led legal challenges, built a popular movement, succeeded in persuading the State of New York to approve and fund a Charter Commission for Staten Island, and forced New York City to hold a special referendum for Island residents on secession. The secession movement and the Charter Commission for Staten Island gained considerable momentum, and though it was ultimately defeated, Marchi's reputation as a thoughtful, deliberate, erudite leader only grew.

Marchi also continued his work to improve public education in the 1980's. Marchi was appointed as Chairman of the Temporary State Commission on New York City School Governance in 1989. This commission conducted a two-year study on the control and governance in New York City schools and provided recommendations to the New York State Legislature on improving administration and public participation in the school system. Senator Marchi also provided assistance to the College of Staten Island so that the school could obtain the land of the former Willowbrook State School for a campus.

In the 1990s, Senator Marchi succeeded in raising the profile of the Island's environmental issues and securing funds to resolve them. Of particular note was Marchi's legislation (1996) to close the Fresh Kills landfill by January 1, 2002. More recently, Senator Marchi was also appointed to head the Senate Task Force on World Trade Center Recovery after the September 11, 2001 attacks. Marchi was named Assistant Majority Whip in 2003 and continues to serve on several standing committees including Corporations, Authorities and Commissions (which he previously chaired); Cities; Environmental Conservation; Finance; Investigations and Government Operations; Judiciary and Rules. Senator Marchi was also recognized by the National Conference of State Legislatures as being the longest serving legislator in America at any level of government.

Senator Marchi still resides in Staten Island. He and his wife, the former Maria Luisa Davini of Lucca, Italy, have two daughters, Aline and Joan, two granddaughters, Stefania and Francesca and a great-grandson, Giuseppe. Senator Marchi is also a member of numerous religious, veterans, professional and civic associations, including the Richmond County and American Bar Associations and the American Judicature Society.

Scope and Content

The John J. Marchi collection comprises approximately 65 linear feet of material, from c. 1958-2000. (There is one item that pre-dates Marchi's legislative career – a 1942 student paper titled "The Zenger Case" for a class in American Constitutional History. It has been placed with the Biographical files.) The core of the collection is the subject file collection; it dates primarily from the 1960s-1990s. With one exception, the collection reflects the activities of Senator Marchi's Albany office. There is one box, however, that appears to have been created in the Senator's local Staten Island office.

There are eight records series and several sub series:

- Subject Files
- Constituent Correspondence
- Legislative Files
 - Legislative Correspondence
 - Bills
 - Voting and Attendance Records
- Media Files
 - Press Releases and Statements
 - Newsletters and Mailings
 - Speeches
 - News Clippings
 - Video
 - Audio Tapes
- Personal Files
 - Appointment Books, Guest Books and Daily Schedules
 - Invitations Accepted and Declined
 - Biographical Files
- Campaigns

- Photographs
- Memorabilia

Subject Files comprise some two thirds of the collection. (Approximately 44 linear feet.) They are arranged in alphabetical order, by folder title. These files document the activities and priorities of Senator Marchi and closely reflect his leadership roles. For example, as Chairman of the Finance Committee (1973-1989), Marchi oversaw the annual production and approval of the Executive Budget; there are copies of the official budgets as well as correspondence that show the tensions and party politics surrounding its production.

Another important topic within Subject Files is Education. Senator Marchi made education, from elementary to college, an important focus. He sat on, or chaired committees that examined a variety of educational issues from school decentralization to public school funding. He was instrumental in the formation of the College of Staten Island, and played a role in oversight of CUNY operations. From 1989-1991, Senator Marchi chaired the “Temporary State Commission on New York City School Governance” and along with a copy of the final report are correspondence and newspaper clippings.

The senator’s major priority was, of course, Staten Island: its residents and its institutions. From the 1950s to the present, Senator Marchi funneled millions of dollars to Staten Island institutions, from the Staten Island Zoo and the Staten Island Children’s Museum to The Learning Institute Jewish Community Center, and Korean-Americans Senior Citizen Center. His relationships with Staten Island institutions are well documented in his papers.

The largest collection of papers within Subject Files is the one covering the possible secession of Staten Island from the City of New York. Beginning with the successful challenge to the New York City Board of Estimate, Marchi’s papers document the legal challenges, public campaign and legislative lobbying efforts from 1983 to the establishment of the Charter Commission for Staten Island in March 1991. From that date, there are extensive records on Public Hearings with transcripts of meetings, minutes of meetings, reports to the Commission on education, housing, a new political structure, and financial implications. There is also correspondence between the Commission members, constituents, and other elected officials, including the Mayor of the City of New York and the Governor of New York State. In addition, there are copies of the actual Charter document produced by the Commission. The records begin to wind down in 1995.

Over the decades, Marchi heard from his constituents on everything from bus schedules to senior citizens and social security to support and dissent on Marchi’s legislative agenda. There is a separate records series for this correspondence; it comprises 3.5 linear feet.

Many of the files provide an insight into the inner workings of a state legislature but the series “Legislative Files” provide most in-depth coverage. They consist of correspondence, bill action registers, legislative introductory records, bills, memoranda of support and press clippings. The files have been divided into three subseries: Legislative Correspondence, Bills, and Voting and Attendance records. Within Legislative Correspondence there are both alphabetical and chronological organizations. To respect the original order, a group of files with the folder heading “Legislative Files” are organized by year, 1970-1973 and 1991. Others are organized alphabetically by topic. There are two boxes of material on legislative activities and public school education, and these are organized chronologically. There are several boxes of transcripts of debates on important bills: Death Penalty, Education, Abortion, and Under-Age Drinking. The series total is 5 linear feet.

The Marchi Papers contain only Marchi’s partial voting records on major issues from 1957-1969.

Senator Marchi’s Media Files contain six subseries, totaling some 4 linear feet: Press Releases and Statements, (1974-1994), (Newsletters and Mailings (1974-1988, and a few from later years), Speeches (1983-1987), Press Clippings (1971-2001), and a few Video and Audio Tapes. The Press Releases subseries may be the most valuable as they document Marchi’s public policy positions, as well as reactions to issues of the day. The Press Clippings subseries is the most extensive one. It covers, in great detail, all the activities of Senator Marchi, local Staten Island issues, and political figures, and often provides context and background for complex legislative proceedings. The Press Clippings are organized primarily by subject: e.g. “Mental Health,” “Budget,” and “Wetlands,” though some are organized by year, with no regard for subject. The Newsletter files contain only a few newsletters: mostly they contain clippings and other reference materials that Marchi’s staff used as content for the published newsletters.

A series has been designated as Senator Marchi’s Personal Files. (Approximately 2 linear feet). Included in this category are Appointment Books, Guest Books and Daily Schedules, Invitations Accepted and Declined, and Biographical Files. The Biographical Files, in addition to containing “snapshot” biographies, also include histories of bills or legislation that Marchi sponsored or co-sponsored.

Contained in the Campaigns series are the records of Senator Marchi’s back-to-back campaigns for Mayor of New York City in 1969 and 1973 (approximately 7 linear feet). There is also a little bit of material on Marchi’s Senate campaigns, but this is quite sparse. The Mayoral campaign material is quite rich, however. It contains campaign literature, press clippings, donor records, “issue” papers, schedules and correspondence with supporters and fellow legislators. Additional daily schedules from the 1973 Mayoral Campaign can be found in the Personal Files series. There is also one oversize box that contains two Campaign posters from the 1973 Mayoral Campaign. The collection also provides both a wider and more in-depth view of John J. Marchi – he articulated and published his positions on a variety of issues, and was interviewed by the media extensively, as was his family.

The Photographs series is arranged chronologically and includes photographs from the 1960's - 1990's. There are also a few photographs from the World War II era.

There are a few items of memorabilia – plaques, proclamations and a statuette.

The materials in the Marchi Papers will be supplemented by an oral history project currently in progress at the College of Staten Island.
