FREE SPEECH FORUM

memoirs of an ex-editor

By Russ Rueger

I have served as an editor of a Richmond College publication for one year and eight months. Almost a year of this has been spent as Editor-In-Chief of the Richmond Times and now I have decided to call it quits. Journalism at Richmond has grown up alongside of the budding college; it has exerienced many of the pains and trials of youth with its parent institution. Therefore, in my last article is Editor of this newspaper, I am taking the opportunity to re-cap some of the dynamics behind the evelopment of journalism at Richmond:

I was elected copy editor of the ewly-formed Richmond Times in fay, 1968, while still a student at taten Island Community College. The Times was a descendent of atori, a short mimeographed paper, which had seen its first and ast issues during Richmond's early xistence. I performed the functions of an editor for the second ssue of the Times, dated Oct. 4, 968.

After the publication of this ssue, general elections for editorhip positions were held. I lost he Ed-In-Chief position to one Charlotte Finkenthal, who I did not think was qualified for this mportant job. As a result, I left he Times staff and teamed up with John Hart (former Ed-In-Chief of S.I.C.C.'s Dolphin) to form in alternative to the Times. We ame up with the idea to create in underground newspaper, Staten sland's first. We went about gathering up a staff and in a few weeks our brain child was born.

The Id

The Id, as we called it (with the subtitle Journal of Opinion), was released on October 28. We exchanged the 11 page mimeographed paper to interested students for a small donation. The Id featured a drawing by myself of a "psychedelic ejaculating penis" to complement a story of John's entitled 'Richmond Penis."

The Id rocked the Richmond boat quite a bit. Pres. Schueler released an open letter to the occupants of the main college building apologizing for this "exercise in juvenile obscenity," as he put it. He claimed that the Id had been received with "shock and revulsion" by all those who had read it and categorically stated that it had been distributed without "prior knowledge of college authorities."

The second underground issue, dated Nov. 12, was called Pravda (Russian for truth). It was an expanded version (16 pages) and was printed on a better press. The issue featured a reprint of Pres. Schueler's letter along with editorial rebuttals by John and myself. No attempt was made by college authorities to prevent distribution.

The third issue, 19 pages, was published in December. We called it Richmond Time, a spoof on Charlotte Finkgenthal's Richmond Times. In fact, we took the masthead of the latter and reproduced it on our cover without the final "s."

In January, 1969, John Hart quit as Co-Editor of the underground, so I became Ed-In-Chief. By that time the mimeographed paper had considerable support from the student body. In contrast, Finkenthal's Times was being threatened with loss of franchise-they had published a few scanty four page issues which were generally agreed upon as being dry, boring and hardly ever read. Many of their staff members had quit the Times to join the underground because of Finkenthal's policies-my suspicions about her incompetence had been confirmed.

The Student Government decided to allocate to the underground office space and funds to secure a professional printer for our next issue. On February 10, the Richmond News-Journal of Opinion was published, 20 pages long and repleat with photos that we had never before had the means to print. It was a rather impressive issue and received quite a bit of praise. It was fated to be the last underground issue.

Underground Surfaces

Shortly after publication, I learned that Finkenthal had resigned as Editor of the Times and that new general elections were to be held. I ran for Ed-In-Chief again and this time succeeded. The staffs of the underground and the old Times merged and on March 13, a new Richmond Times came into being. The first issue was 12 pages, triple the size of Finkenthal's predecessor. It was generally accepted as greatly improved.

I learned how to work the Times camera and began to make sure each issue had photos to accompany the major stories. John Hart made a journalistic comeback for this, new, expanded Richmond Times he became technical editor for the second issue and eventually rose to Co-Editor. The publication of one of his "From the Hart" columns resulted in a court case. A Conservative student group, Students for Richmond, took offense at his use of the name "Jesus Christ" in his essay; they won a decision to prevent the Times from publishing articles critical of religion. This decision is currently not in effect because it is being appealed.

The Bust

The third issue we published that spring featured a photo of a student with a report that he was a narcotics informer. This photo had been delivered to my office and after careful checking to confirm the report, we published it. Shortly afterwards, the narcotics informer contacted me and offered to pay for the printing of an issue in exchange for the 200 or so file copies with his photo that remained in my office. Christen me Dupe of the Decade: I fell for his ruse. He visited my apartment in the middle of April and handed me marked bills for the extra copies; he returned a short time later with a half dozen detectives.

Russ Rueger

To make a long story short, I was carted off to jail where I was charged with all kinds of awful crimes, like Grand Larceny by Extortion and Narcotics Possession. I was infuriated and when released from custody the following day, I published a one-page Special Edition exposing the whole fiasco. Many students became irate at this type of thing being allowed to occur and the occupied the President's office for awhile.

Eventually, the guy who busted me (who has single departed from Richmond) came to his senses and dropped the insane charges.

Current Events

This brings us to the present semester. Among the innovations that we have put into effect was the inclusion of press services. Liberation News Service (LNS) and College Press Service (CPS) have enabled us to bring to the Richmond Community national, international and political news that they would not find in the mass media. We also published two double-sectioned 20 page issues for the first time. We managed to release two issues, dated Dec. 10 and 18, only 8 days apart, the shortest period that has ever lapsed between publicationes at Richmond.

The End

There comes a time when one must move to new realms and leave behind the old. Although I am not graduating until June, I am resigning as Editor now because I feel there is nothing left in me to give. I have been creatively exhausted.

The Editorship of a college newspaper is a trying, yet highly rewarding experience . . . but there are . other worlds waiting to be conquered . . .

RICHMOND TIMES UNDER A

Schueler: Shocked and Revolted

Staten Island Advance Dec. 1, 1968

Responding to an issue of an unofficial mimeographed student newspaper, the president of Richmond College felt compelled recently to distribute an open letter to the community to "offer my apology . . . for this offense by the 'editors' to the canons of basic decency."

But the editors printed answer was to the effect that, "Your letter of criticism is a lot of - ing -," using what common people consider the ultimate expletives.

Thus another college president, in this case Richmond's Dr. Herbert Schueler, generally considered to be liberally oriented, finds himself pictured as a reactionary by radical elements on campus.

To the administration, the paper is an exercise in tastelessness, smut and plain old-fashioned obscenity.

To the editors, it is an exercise in testing a "supposedly permissive, liberal policy" and in basking in free speech.

The first issue was called The Id, taken from Freud's mind structure theory, but was subsequntly changed to Pravda, the Russian word for "truth" and the name of the official Soviet Union newspaper. It called itself an "An Uncensored Journal of Opinion.

Pravda operates as an underground paper, unlike the Richmond Times, the official college newspaper. The editors, John Hart and Russ Rueger, are applying to the student government for official recognition.

What perhaps prompted the open letter from Schueler to "the students and faculty of Richmond College and to our neighbors in 130 Stuyvesant Pl." (the main address of the college) was the distribution by the paper to anyone who walked into the building which, in addition to the college, houses a bank and telephone company offices.

Scheuler said "it was received by all who read it, except perhaps the 'editors,' with shock and revulsion. I wish to state categorically that this exercise in juvenile obscenity was produced outside Richmond College . . . I ask that the transbody . . ."

first issue-12 mimeograph pages ings, so to speak. stapled together - depicts a same anatomical part headlined the lead story. The back page consisted almost exclusively of a large four-letter obscene word.

The second issue carried attacks by Hart and Rueger on Schueler's reactions. Hart's fictional account, in the first issue, of the orgiastic experiences of a priest did "reveal," Rueger said, the "dogmatic hypocrisy of organized religion. The phallus, Rueger said, complemented a story which utilized imagery . . . to depict a situation all too true.

The purpose, Rueger said, was "to test out" the administration. He denied that obscenity could be defined, and defended the right of free speech. Both he and Hart accused Schueler of trying to dictate standards.

Hart, in a six-point rebuttal of Schueler, noted that the dean of students granted permission to use the lobby for distribution purposes although Schueler said in his letter: "I wish to state categorically that this . . . was distributed in the lobby without prior knowledge of college authorities," and that both he and Rueger were elected to the student government two days after their underground paper first appeared and was received, according to Schueler, with "shock and revulsion" by "all who read

Hart further noted that he was the former editor of the Staten Island Community College paper which had received several national awards, and that Rueger had written extensively for that paper, the Dolphin.

Dr. Robert E. Childs, Richmond's dean of students, acknowledged that the editors had received permission to distribute the newspaper but he said that this was due to a misunderstanding.

"I assumed it was the Richmond Times, he said. "The college obviously didn't know what the hell this paper was-it was the first one.

TACK: ISSUE IS CENSORSHIP

THE RICHMOND TIMES STAFF RESPONDS...

Censorship: Block To Free Discourse

It seems that certain critiand characterizations of Christ and the Christian Doctrines originating the Richmond Times have offended some of the citizens of Staten Island. Because of this Assemblyman Edward J. Amann has introduced a bill which would, in effect, require a censorship board for city and state funded college papers. The censorship would be centered upon material which was irreligious, obscene, or pornographic. Exactly what is meant by these terms and material it would effect would be determined by this board.

The whole idea is preposterous in that we (The Richmond Times and other CUNY papers) would be forced to subject our articles to judgment by people values and whose standards might be different from our own. Assuming that their values are different it follows that the articles which did get into print would be one's which they judged to be worth reading and at the same time inoffensive. The reader would be limited in what he could read according to a set of standards which were not his own. This is where a free press ends. The press then belongs to a certain few who have control over its contents. It is for this very reason that passage of a law of this kind does not protect the rights of the individuals but rather it prohibits those rights.

The Richmond Times is a free in addition to reporting the news of any kind.

-Jay it provides a place where the individual who has an opinion can make it known. It means that your satisfaction or dissatisfaction with religion, government, the school administration, art, or ANYTHING YOU LIKE can be printed for all to see. paper provides a place where discourse between differences in opinion or perspectives can continue. Should the rights of certain individuals to print their ideas be taken away, the discourse stops.

> The threat of censorship has been directed towards the Richmond Times and all the city college papers. The initial threat came from Assemblyman Edward J. Amman in a proposed bill. Another assemblyman, Lucio F. Russo, has now proposed that the state education commissioner be empowered to fire any president of a city or state university who allows publication of irreligious, obscene, or pornographic material. I can only surmise that the purpose of this second proposal is to placate the irate cititzens of Staten Island who found objection to the paper.

The effect of these proposals, should they become laws, would be nil. If the president of our college was fired on this basis, he would find the paper and the student body united behind him. In any event the Richmond Times will never subject itself, or its contributors to limitaspeech forum. This means that tions, restrictions, or censorship

Community Spreads the Word

-Jeri The good people of Staten Island condemn material such as that in the middle of this center-fold as being irreligious. It is their belief that articles like this one should be censored from the paper. Obviously then, one would expect that they would not want their community to be exposed to an item such as the above-mentitoned one-since they feel it should have been censored in the first place. Oddly enough, however, it is these good people who are responsible for making said article available to their community. For the time being, The RICHMOND TIMES' staff only distributes to Richmond College and Staten Island I guess - seeing is believing!

Community College, and keeps up a small mailing list of peowho have requested paper. It seems, therefore, that some up-standing members the S.I. community took it upon themselves to invest a considerable amount of their time, effort, and money, in the reprinting and distribution of the same type of material that they are now fighting to keep out of the sight of their fellow citizens. It is comically absurd to think of good church folk distributing "censored" reading matter, whatever their purpose. Did they think that their fellow church goers would not believe a clear description of the material? As they say

MISDIRECTED LEGISLATION

-Mark Not only much ado about nothing but also, much ado aimed in the wrong direction. The recent furor and subsequent proposed bills have responded to material printed in this student newspaper by attempting make the college administration bear the total responsibility for OUR actions. Messrs. Russo. Lindsay, and Amann fail realize that the RICHMOND TIMES is truly a student newspaper and would not permit any type of censorship from school administration. In fact these bills would, without realizing it, give the editors of the | college presidents fired by simply finding some "irreligious, pornographic or other offensive material." This would not be hard. Already a picture of Christ on a dartboard has been submitted, and I'm sure this would be grounds for another furor should we print it. It would seem that the likely way to try to the student newspaper would be to direct the legal responsibility of newspaper tent at the student editors or writers-where it belongs. The administration should be left out of this because the students make the decisions to write or print articles and we are willing to take the responsibility for our newspaper the power to have own actions and thoughts.
